About Henrik Juel

- just a student of life

My primary education is in Philosophy. I have had scholarships and teaching jobs at 5 different Danish universities before settling at Roskilde University, where I am an associate professor. Currently I teach mainly at Communication Studies, the International Track.

I undertake practical workshops in Speech and in Video production, and my theoretical lectures and seminars span from Rhetoric, Film Theory, Argumentation, Aesthetics, Digital Media and general Communication Theory to philosophical detours into Phenomenology, Hermeneutics and Critical Theory.

I also work as peer-reviewer and as exam censor within a number of academic fields.

Privately, however, I live out in the country at Fyn, maintaining an old house and a large garden with fruit and vegetables.

My son tries to keep me updated on social media and gaming. I have a passion for old films late at night, beautiful cars, a superlight racing bike and sailing an authentic, hand-built Viking ship with my friends, and I am:
